Corporate America presents Healthcare Revenue Group with the 2017 North American Excellence Award.

New York, New York (February 24, 2017) Healthcare Revenue Group (HRG) has received an award of excellence from Corporate America. The 2017 award winners were chosen after months of research and analysis from the Corporate America's dedicated awards team who evaluated organizations based on merit and success in its industry. The 2017 North American Excellence Award honor companies and individuals where consistency to provide exceptional service has been the driving force behind innovation and commitment to thrive. The achievement of HRG is a result of outcome-based results in performance, data supported decision-making, its use of technology to lead by example, cutting edge paperless operation with an evident and driving passion for its work.

"Being recognized for achieving excellence in our business sector is a result of our team and business approach in the markets," comments Ken Klingensmith, Managing Partner of HRG. "As any organization, we have evolved over the years and have met our fair amount of challenge but at the end of the day, we prevail because of a team focused on doing what's right." He continued with reference to a quote by Jack Welch that "The team with the Best Players Wins" and that is exactly what has happened for his company.

Emma Keen, awards coordinator, expressed her pride in the award winners: "North America has a thriving corporate market, which is entirely thanks to the businesses and the individuals driving them who work tirelessly to achieve excellence. I would like to congratulate every one of my deserving winners and wish them the best of luck for the future." Each and every winner was chosen on merit only, and can take great pride from the fact that they were selected for their success.
